

Ana Maria Timóteo Félix, MD,PhD

ACeS Baixo Vouga, Aveiro, Portugal

Doutora Ana Félix is graduated in medicine from the University of Coimbra, Master in Environmental and Occupational Health from the University of Porto and PhD in Health Sciences from the University of Aveiro. She is Assistant Professor at the University of Aveiro, lecturing Pharmacology and Therapeutics and Epidemiology.

She is Head of the Public Health Medical Career Service, Health Delegate at ACeS Baixo Vouga, Aveiro municipality, Director of the Aveiro Public Health Laboratory and responsible for Traveler Consultation.

She is the Health representative for the Port of Aveiro and for the Municipal Emergency and Civil Protection Plan for the Municipality of Aveiro. At the regional level, she is an Advisor to the Board of Directors of ARS Centro for Program for the Control of Infection and Resistance to Antibiotics and Laboratories. At the national level, she is a consultant to the General Directorate of Health and is part of the Support Unit for the National Health Authority and Public Health Emergencies.